Electricity bills can go up or down from month to month due to factors such as time of year and how you heat or cool your home.

If you'd like to pay a consistent amount each month, Idaho Power offers Budget Pay, a convenient payment option available to current residential customers with no past-due amounts owed.

How Does Budget Pay Work?

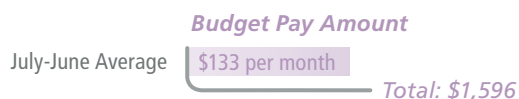

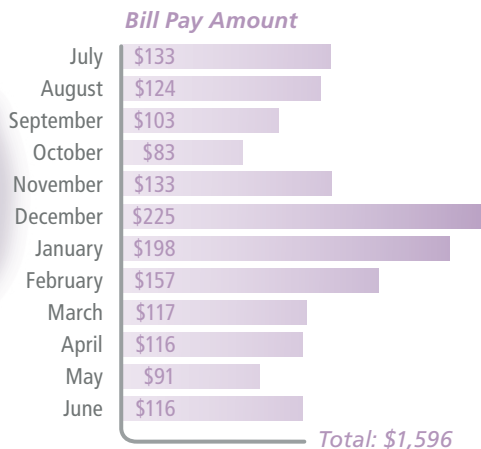

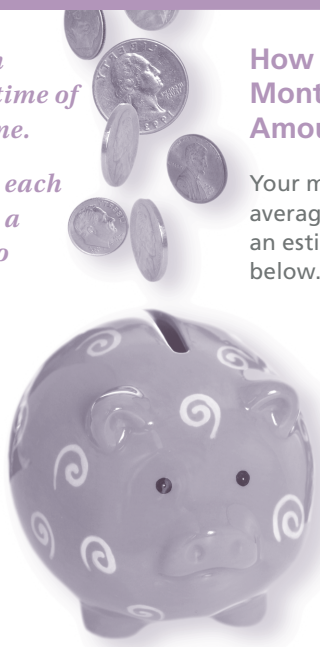

With Budget Pay, you continue to be billed for the amount of electricity you use each month but your monthly payment amount remains the same.

How Often Does My Budget Pay Amount Change?

Your Budget Pay amount is reviewed at least once a year. It may be revised more frequently if your actual energy usage changes or if we have a change in the rates we charge. We will notify you about any changes to your Budget Pay amount.

How Is My Monthly Payment Amount Determined?

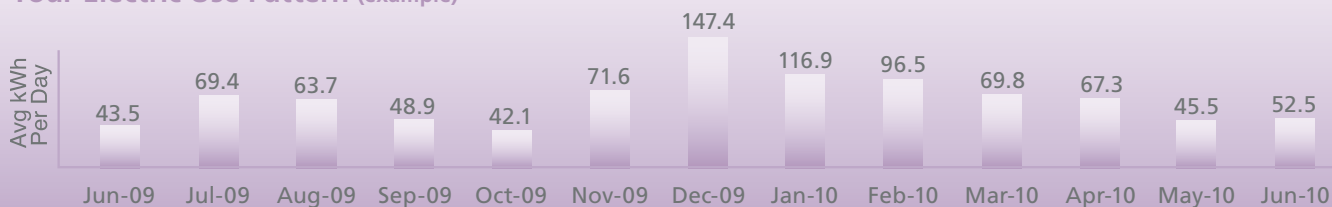

Your monthly Budget Pay amount is based on the average of your previous 12-month billing history or an estimate of future charges. An example is shown below.

How Do I Know How Much Electricity I Am Using?

We continue to record the amount of energy you actually use and show it to you on your bill. To help you understand and better manage your electricity use throughout the year, we encourage you to refer to the chart on your Idaho Power bill labeled "Your Electric Use Pattern." An example is shown below.

How Can I Save Energy?

While Budget Pay makes it easier for you to anticipate and budget for monthly payment amounts, Idaho Power encourages you to use energy wisely at all times. Your efforts help Idaho Power meet our commitment to provide you with reliable, responsible, fair-priced electricity. For energy-saving ideas, visit www.idahopower.com/energyefficiency.
